World Bank loan

981. SHRI RAOOF VALIULLAH: Will the Minister of FINANCE be pleased to state:

(a) whether it is a fact that only 70 per cent of the loan amount received by the Government of India from the World Bank for State Government sponsored projects is passed on to the concerned State Governments; and

(b) if so, what are the reasons for retaining 30 per cent of the loan amount by the Central Government when the amount so received is meant for meeting the costs of projects of State Government?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF FINANCE (SHRI JANARDHAN POOJARI): (a) and (b) Government of India have a well defined arrangement for transfer of resources from the Centre to States. The Finance Commission determines the norms of devolution of funds from Central tax receipts to state revenue every five year. The developmental plans of the States which include all externally aided projects are assisted through central assistance the bulk of which is distributed on the basis of what is generally described as the revised Gadgil formula.

In determining the total resources for the country's plan, foreign assistance received is taken into account. The central assistance distributed to States therefore already takes into account the total foreign aid received. Consequently, the Central Assistance to any foreign aided project is more than what is reflected through 70 per cent additional central assistance on account of externally aided projects since it is in addition to the central assistance which is normally part of the Gadgil formula.
